74 gigabytes is the average amount of data our brains process each day, a number that is sucking the souls out of confused and frustrated employees. As this amount of information continues to fly at us, our jobs move faster and become more complex. Employees at all levels feel exhausted, burned out, brain dead and depressed. A brand-new leadership method is proving to reverse this trend and transform job hate to job love. Get insights from Lisa Danels, global human capital expert, author and speaker on this brave new world.
